you have e mailed me for the past two days.. I said last week it would be great if,, and nothing happens.. it would be great if.. i have done my best to be calm and constructive ,, the result is the same.. you do as you please . it makes no difference if it is it would be great if, or please or i would appreciate it if, or i'veve told you time and again,,, it doesn't happen... the dead horse leaves a mess on the floor , day after day,, it is true it is a very small cute horse. but it has no follow through

Obviously I have been emailing you about boarding training schools. Instead of a constructive response you keep beating a dead horse and the only result of these emails is more stress and tension. It would be more productive if you chose to focus on the future instead of the past (that's why ' it would be great '...)
