COMMENCING
MANDATORY BREAK

The other Ernestos avoid me... is it because I'm defective?

is it even communicable?

I don't like these breaks I'd rather be working.

Security's inefficient in my corner of the cubicles, so sometimes I go exploring.

I... do get lost
occasionally, though.

crowd goes wild!

Will it be yet another home run for him, folks?

Here comes the pitch!

Tragedy! Misfortune! Our rising star falls far too soon!

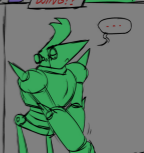

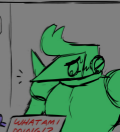

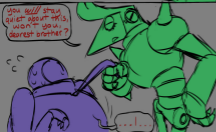

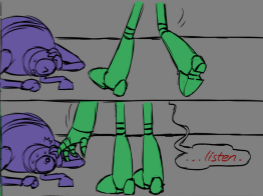

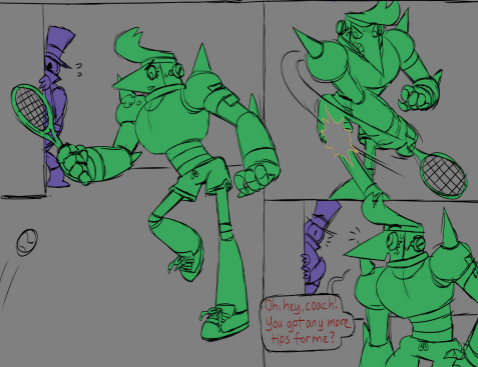

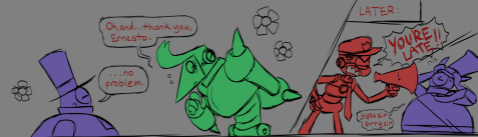

What of his future?
His career? His

HOW LONG HAVE YOU BEEN THERE!?

o-oh god

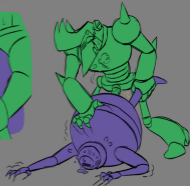

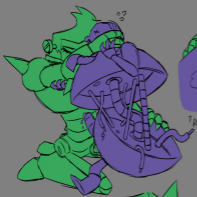

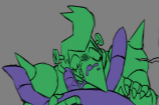

ahhhH/NGH-!!

Looks like you need some endurance training, coach.

WOW, DOESN'T TAKE MUCH FOR YOU, HUH?

WELL, LIKE IT OR NOT...

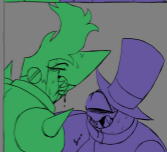

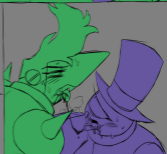

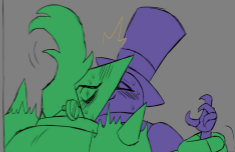

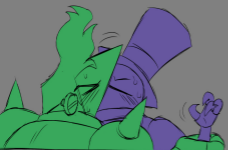

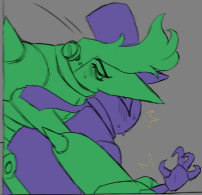

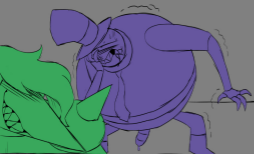

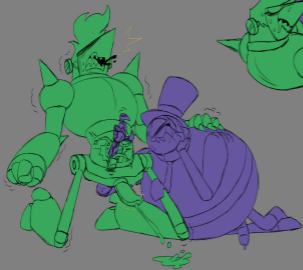

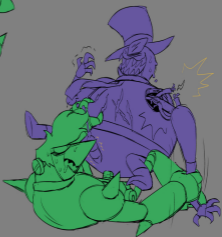

I'M GONNA REARRANGE

Author's Note?

I'm... not sure I ever imagined I'd actually make a doujin of my own? I don't have a ton of experience making comics, and I generally tend to lose interest in fandoms relatively quickly... but here I am! And here you are. Thank you for reading my first doujin, Error Terror! It was a lot of work, but tons of fun too!

For anyone confused, or just unfamiliar with OK KO itself, Ernesto 271 and Raymond 53 are... basically my OCs, haha. They're very much not indicative of how things are in the show--even their designs are different from the canon Ernestos and Raymonds! For example, 271 doesn't have lines on his collar or belly stripe, has a (very) visible mouth, and is quite a bit shorter (this was actually unintentional and kind of inconsistent, but I rolled with it).

I'm pretty nervous about how indulgent this project is, and am not really sure whether this kind of thing would even be interesting to other people, but I drew it anyway...! I'd love to hear feedback of any kind.

I learned a lot from this experience, and am tentatively looking forward to doing more works like this in the future. I want to extend special thank-yous to the following people, without which I probably never would have done this in the first place: Snout, who got me thinking about doujins at all and patiently answered a ton of my questions, Idle, who has just been consistently supportive and Working His Ass Off, and especially Font, who has cheered me on and enabled the hell out of me every step of the way.♡♡

Thanks for reading!
