

Hey guys, I'm just here to chime in with my experience as someone who dated Tom around December 2018 - September 2019. Important context to everything I'm about to say is that we were both in high school when we met, and we lived on opposite ends of the country, so I never had to share a room with the man. Those are the limitations to which I can accurately explain how he carried himself throughout our relationship. I'll attach what proof I can, but this happened ~7 years ago and for reasons I'll explain toward the end, I don't have much to provide other than my memory. Also, since it's been so long and we were both younger, I'm not going to be including anything regarding my memory on his personal bedroom preferences, etc. I understand that those are important points in this overall conversation, however I think just providing info on his general attitude may prove helpful nonetheless. Also, I was a cringe child in 2019, I'm oh so aware of that.

I met Tom on his discord server in December of 2018. I had been joining random servers that day in search of people to play games with, which landed me on JAubrey's server, which landed me on Tom's. I didn't know who Tom was before that day, but I saw that the server was attached to a Youtuber and from there I googled his account. Unless it was during our relationship, I have never seen a Turkey Tom video start - finish, so in no way was this him "taking advantage of a fan." I joined one of the voice channels on his server, and started playing games with a few of the people online. Tom came online, saw that I was new to the server and in the chat (IIRC he had less than 40k at this time, so the server was much smaller,) he joined the VC and we chatted for a while in the group, he sent me a private DM, and we began to develop a close friendship from there. I had a boyfriend at the time so at first, we were just friends. Once I ended that relationship, things started to transition from friends to a relationship.

Thanks for bein such a cool girlfriend, I couldn't ask for a better one. You're smart n cool n funny n also the prettiest girl I've ever met, and I LOVE you. Mwish ♡

P.S. Sorry the package took so long to send, the post office dude said I couldn't put all this love in one tiny box!!! Had to get a new one.

Aside from the general mistreatment of women (and me specifically? I was admittedly an annoying turd back then so to each their own) on the server, things were fine for a while. We were young antisocial shut-ins with unlimited access to discord and I think we each just really appreciated having someone to talk to. We collaborated on a few minecraft videos on what used to be his second server, and I would help collect info and edit from time to time. At that point, I don't think he had dated anyone for any "long" period of time since becoming more serious about youtube, so maybe it was easier for him to share that part of his life at the time. We would also send each other care packages with things like candy, letters, and sweaters, and spent most of our time on voice or video chat together. There were a couple streamers/tubers that he introduced me to over video game sessions, although I couldn't tell you their names now that it's been so long. Also important to note, my parents were pretty smart with not allowing me technology as a preteen. I was allowed a blackberry phone until I was around 16, and from there I got a summer job and bought my own first PC, so a lot of this world was very new to me at the time.

private twitter today

he deactivated it lmao

That's so cute 😂😂

i cant hold a convo with like anyone but i can with this girl ahhh also this like these girl shes pretty cool time for tom to be creepy this girl is actually so pretty like wow wow wow wow wow wow really hoping things work out with this

The first thing that really bothered me was that he shared images of my face with his discord chat without my permission. I was pretty selective at that time on who I let know pretty much anything about my personal life. Discord was still a pretty new sphere, and I wanted to play things safe. I remember being really upset that my privacy wasn't valued by the one person who had the most power to protect it.

tom took screenshots he took when we were goofing off in a video call and he made memes of them and sent it to our online friends and i haven't shown them any pics of me really maybe one

what

why would he do that he didn't think i would mind he thought it was funny and that bc i'm friends with them i'd be ok did they actually make fun of it they were just like XD funnytitiit like if he had just sent them and that was that it'd be different not really i've told him before i don't want people seeing pics of me okay then no matter what it isn't ok why would he idek cause he was high and thought i was more comfy with it

Second, which I don't have any proof of so believe this if you want, was when he first started running his own patreon. I was initially allowed on the patreon discord server, but I quickly learned that the patreon attracted women that were really into Tom, and really didn't like that we were dating, so I remember one girl in particular talking mad shit and making up weird shit about me. I remember asking him if he could just stop accepting her subscription, but I guess the $5/month was too vital because I ended up just losing server access, and if I so much as brought it back up again I was a crazy bitch for still caring. Let me reiterate. I met this man playing games on discord. I didn't sign up to be a youtuber gf who is just cool with being walked on 24/7.

(Almost) lastly because this shit has an epilogue... Sometime in September, he broke up with me and said it was because his mother didn't like me. The thing is, his IRL high school friends not only knew who I was but had my Instagram, and one let me know that Tom actually just wanted to pursue someone at his school. Which is totally fine, just don't lie. Obviously, after hearing this information I decided to start talking to other people again. After about a week, Tom comes back and asks to be back together. We were both young and I hadn't had the chance to move on yet, I'm still heartbroken, so of course I say yes. I tell him that I also dipped my toes in the dating pool during our time apart, and that "switch" that the first girls mentioned flipped. He called me a whore, slut, told me to eat glass and die, and then one by one my instagram, discord, and even personal phone number started to blow up with messages from accounts I didn't recognize (gee wonder how that happened.)

He wanted to go for a girl in our school and we told him that if he was gonna go for another girl then he shouldn't do it while dating you

Because that's wrong

Now take that as you wish but I was just trying to be helpful

In all I just want Tom to do what's best for him, he didn't have to take my advice yeah he never told me that he told me there was nobody else and he wasn't gonna talk to anyone while he took this break

I want to say I was the one who broke things off in the end, but it's been years and my memory isn't 100%. Tom told me some really weird things over the course of our relationship, and out of fear of harassment I just really wanted to end things amicably. He told me at one point that his family had mob ties and they 'had people' in the city next to mine. As someone who's been employed and away from that community for a few years I understand how ridiculous that sounds, but at the time I really did let it bother me. He didn't, however, mention any "just incase" folder, so perhaps things ended so badly that he figured he better cover his ass better next time. I guess he got lucky that I was a scared bitch back then.

He didn't stop talking about me for around 5-6 months post-breakup. I had to ask him multiple times to stop. I work 2 jobs, I'm a full time student, and that's just the kind of person I've always been (especially since leaving the internet.) I deleted my discord shortly after, deactivated my instagram, and got a new phone. My whole life had existed digitally for the majority of that year, and so being in any digital space held way too many reminders of a time I really wanted to forget. I of course made and kept a few friends during that time, but I've left ALL of that behind me. Still, I feel like I failed somehow by not talking more. One of his exes after me had reached out to me a few years ago, we talked for a long time over the phone comparing stories, but I still wanted to think the best and that he could change.

there it this tweet but i didnt mention you by name or anything like that People know who that is, blocked you on my phone but didn't know messages would still show up on my MacBook. Just stop. Don't know why you're still milking our situation for tweets but stop talking abt me.

If there's one thing being a YouTuber has taught me, it's this: Don't shit where you eat. Don't fuck your fans, don't fuck fellow YouTubers, don't mix your relationships with your YouTube channel and your fellow business partners. If you make a living from YT, treat it that way.

All I ever wanted was an apology for putting me through shit I never signed up for. I remember begging over the phone for us to just talk things out and be amicable, and he said he was too nervous I would record the call and pretty much hung up on me. He made me feel like if I was made out to be someone who was against him, people would come after me, and combining the online harassment I was already experiencing + the suggestion of mob ties in the city next to mine, I wanted to keep things friendly. No dice, and if this post isn't proof enough, I didn't record our conversations. Unless it was something said to my friends back then, I pretty much don't have it anymore. My job from the beginning was to be a supportive girlfriend and for doing that I was called a slut, clout chaser, e-girl. If it was for clout, why was I buying him games? These behaviors existed before everything that's recently come out, and maybe even before me. If I could blame anyone, it would be the youtubers he was friends with before/when we were dating that gave him such a toxic outlook on pretty much everything. When you think about it, of course the most toxic community breeds the most toxic character traits.

This whole thing has been really disappointing to see, but if my experience can provide a little background to everything that's happening now, then I'm glad I shared it. Like I said, I'm a busy gal and don't anticipate too many questions regarding this post, but if there are any I'll try to get to them as soon as possible. Good luck and godspeed, soldiers. I know I'm lacking many screenshots, I'm a 25 year old girl who genuinely just wanted to forget this era, but if I have ONE regret it's not screenshotting and saving when he had texted me a link to "Scott Pilgrim Ruined a Generation of Women" by Negative XP post breakup. Courtesy meme my friends made me at the time all of this was going down.

tmw your gf breaks up with you for being emotionally manipulative and then call her a slut and an egirl tmw you remember that you have a large and toxic audience that will believe everything you say

Okay so, here we go.

Hello ladies and gentleman. My name is Turkey Tom, and today, as on many other days, I am going to tell you a story. One of disgust, betrayal, lies, 'friends,' clowns, redemption, and pure shenanigans. So strap in, grab your terrible twitter takes, disgustingly embarrassing nsfw accounts, and keemstar blowing everything the hell up. This is gonna be a doozy.

(Intro)

This video is a part two of my last video, I would highly recommend going ahead and watching that before you watch this video or else a lot of this just won't make sense to you, but I'll try to explain most of the context along the way anyway. To catch a few of you up or jog your memories, here's a recap.
