One of the most fascinating things about the modern age we live in is the population of journalists almost exclusively being from mega rich families and the fact they have done such a good job of hiding it from the internet.

The most extreme case of this is Carlos Maza. Right out of Wake Forrest University he worked for Vox pushing extreme left wing views & targeting anyone on the right no matter how poor or middle class.

What almost no one knew was he was a billionaire.

What's amazing about this is almost no one knew his mother & step father were tech billionaires with multiple mansions, yachts & private planes. Maza was raised in a $10.8 million dollar mansion in Boca Raton, FL.

Until his termination at Vox there was no Google result you could get that could tell you anything on Carlos Maza's background. Nothing. A complete memory hole. For almost 10 years he was able to use his massive platform to cancel anyone he saw fit to & abuse his power unchecked.

It wasn't until he was fired from Vox for being too much of a left wing extremist (just let that sink in) & he began his failed YouTube career did anyone do any digging into how this guy afforded some of the most expensive real estate in New York with no income...

A billionaire journalist who went to Christopher Columbus High School & Wake Forrest University was able to cosplay working class socialist attacking poor & working class people for years without anyone knowing his real background.

Taylor Lorenz might actually be an even worse offender of this hypocrisy. While also born to fabulous wealth & privilege she has the family power to keep her past off the internet even after it became known.

She can actually get it removed forever from the internet.

What's amazing about Taylor Lorenz is we know she was born in NYC, raised in the richest zip code of Connecticut. We know she attended a Swiss private boarding school & graduated from Hobart and William Smith College. But that's about it.

While this woman of wealth & privilege can doxx even the poorest, weakest, least powerful people in the internet, publishing all their private information, address, work places and phone numbers. She can apparently get anything about herself wiped from the internet forever...

How would a TikTok journalist be able to get her history wiped off the internet forever? Well hold onto your butts while we go balls deep into the family of Ms. Lorenz you can't find on the internet without much much effort.

For the record this all publicly available information, it's just hard to find without looking.

Taylor Lorenz was born to mega rich developer Walter R. Lorenz (65) and Anne Lorenz (67) & raised in a $5.7 million dollar mansion. Her sister is Brook Lorenz of CNN.

But it's her uncle that's the big story here. You see Taylor Lorenz's mom and uncle were mega rich children of a very powerful politician... and R. McDonald (her uncle) is the owner / founder of the WayBackMachine internet archive.

Trying to find info about any of these people on the internet is nearly impossible. Taylor Lorenz even had her uncle exempt her twitter account from the WayBackMachine. Once she deletes her tweets they are literally wiped from the internet forever. Now that's power you can't buy

Go ahead... Google her. Go to her wiki page. You see anything there like you do with literally any other public figures? NOPE! Nothing.

She's even managed to have any public record of her date of birth wiped. Pics of her from high school or collage that could age her?

Gone.

Taylor Lorenz, a mega rich child of wealth and privilege from a powerful political family who's uncle can wipe any of her history off the internet forever has been given massive platforms with the NYTs and WaPo to attack, smear, doxx, harass & terrorize anyone she wants.

Ben Collins (not the race car driver from Top Gear) of NBC News has leveraged his power and family wealth to become one of the most powerful internet hall monitors of our age...

NevilleTheCat @FearTheFloof · 2h

While Taylor Lorenz can get her wiki page wiped, Ben doesn't even have one. Like really? The lead disinformation journalist at the biggest network news platform in the United States has not even a blurb that pops up in the first 100 Google results???

Like... there are obscure poets from 100's of years ago from countries that don't exist anymore that have at least a burb on wiki. How is information on one of the most powerful journalists with a massive platform so hard to find?

Ben Collins Family

Ben was born in Bristol but raised to the age of ten of his in California in the US, where his father worked for a distribution company. Our efforts to find out more about her family came to no avail, as no such information is publicly available. Thus, the identity of Ben's parents is still unclear. It is also not known if she has any siblings. We will update this section once this information is available.

Ben Collins has built a brand around targeting citizens who work against Democrats & labeling them domestic terrorists. For the most part he targets the poor & middle class, the weak, the people with no resources & no way to fight back or clear their name once smeared.

NevilleTheCat @FearTheFloof · 2h

But again... Ben Collins gets to be a private person. His parents, his address, his personal & private life are protected from public view. You don't get to know about the wealth & privilege he grew up in. But if he targets you, everyone will know what you had for dinner.

Some of the rich & powerful have not made the effort to hide their wealth & privilege as they are so rich & powerful they have no fucks to give about you knowing they can crash you... insert the Matt Yhlesias type journalist.

Matthew Yglesias 41 years old was born to Rafael Yglesias, millionaire screenwriter & novelist. His paternal grandparents were novelists Jose Yglesias and Helen Yglesias.

That's Generational wealth.

Matthew Yglesias was admitted to Harvard under its legacy program because his father also went to Harvard. Nice gig.

He did graduate top of his class with a degree in... philosophy.

So it seems his dad didn't go to Harvard, but there are a lot of hits that he was admitted under the legacy program.

On that one I'll take the L.

It does seem pretty well documented he had a multimillion dollar trust fund he used to buy his NY condo with cash.
