MAKING THE LEAP FROM THE COMIC PAGE TO THE BIG SCREEN

Socially Unconscious has taken many forms over the years. Originally starting as a student comic strip at the University of Mississippi, it was soon syndicated to other college newspapers. As computers allowed more and more sophisticated work, the art of the series was constantly evolving. After I invented and patented a new digital animation technique, plans were put into place to develop the comic strip as an animated pilot. The film cost 150,000$ to produce, and took up the better part of two years. You can read much more about in the pages ahead.
