Author's Note!

HOW DID I MANAGE TO MAKE TWO DOUJINSHIS WITHIN A MONTH? I scare myself. Anyway, thank you so much for reading Short Circuit! There was a lot of love poured into it... I hope you liked it? This is a lot darker and less humorous overall than Error Terror was, so I'm a bit uncertain about how it'll be received. However, I feel like I've learned boatloads about making comics along the way! I'm happy to be here.

Raymond feels even more out-of-character in this story than before, which is something I'm insecure about, but... I think it's okay. I just wanted to see him being a creep, haha! I'm sorry if it makes anyone uncomfortable! I went through a lot of premises hinging on loli Shannon x Raymond before settling on this one... originally, Raymond was going to be doofier, and the situation would have been consensual--but, while cute, it didn't really speak to me. Also, I wouldn't have gotten to draw my favorite kinds of expressions! The murder-y kind! Tragic.

Once again, I'd like to give some special thank-yous to all of my friends who encouraged me this whole time, but especially the following people: Snout, who's been a routinely helpful and supportive inspiration overall, Kos, who gave me paneling HOT TIPS on several occasions, Idle, who helped me edit the cover and has just been wonderful all around, and ESPECIALLY Font. Font is amazing!! They validated me every single day I was working on this silly thing, and they even broke my brain with the concept of loli Shannon in the first place!!!!

Well, that's all for now! I'm hoping I'll have the restraint to take a break from making doujinshis for at least a little while, just so I can draw fanart freely... You can find me on Twitter at @teebsfw and @teebsly, though! Seeya!

Thanks for reading!
