Concord sucked cause it was a bad game not because it had inclusion. And Wukong is not a good game or a bad game for not including inclusion. inclusion is not mandatory for a game to be good.

Nop. The words that end up with "e" are neutral. That's why the inclusive language in Spanish replaces the "a" and "o" with "e" to make it neutral.

Cause we need people to understand us and games to normalize our inclusion and the easiest way to do it is by showing support for pro-trans game and explaining why discrimination and transphobia are bad without getting anyone pissed. Internet fights won't make people respect us.

So I realize I am completely incapable of not wanting to help every girl I meet and wanting to fix all their issues and economic needs. This also mean I can't have gf cause I will always be looking for more girls to find validation from. It's a curse. I need therapy to be level.

therapy to be loyal.

In Costa Rica moms have paid maternity 1 month before giving birth and three months after giving birth. That is the law here and not complying with it can cause sanctions to employers. Half is paid by the employer and half is paid by out healthcare system. Dad have 2 days a week

In my third world country (Costa Rica) moms have a one month maternity leave before giving birth and 3 months after giving birth. Also dads have 2 days for weeks for 4 weeks after the child is born. All that is fully paid. Half by your employer and half by the social security.

Implying game performance can cancel the value of the story, characters, world and gameplay of a game.
Yes the leadership of the company screwed up the optimization of the game for consoles but the game got it's good reviews for a reason: Everything else is awesome in the game.

Cyberpunk 2077 is awesome is just that is a buggy and performance mess. The game got good reviews its story and gameplay is awesome enough to not have mediocre review over its mediocre optimization on consoles. But we can be certain everything else is perfect.
